1. The cracking refinery was northeast of Ufa (56°00'E/54°45'N), on the right bank of the Belaya River. The plant covered an area of about 800 square meters. There were spur tracks to the main railroad line leading to Chelyabinsk, a suburb of Ufa. The refinery, said to have been in operation since the previous Five-Year Plan, had a number of distillation towers (Kolonentuerme), boiler and machine houses, concrete workshops with stills, pump stations, workshops and secondary buildings. The different departments were connected by a maze of compressing installations, fittings, and pipes. A residue-processing installation for asphalt could be definitely identified. The refinery was constantly being enlarged.
2. The plant was connected with the long-distance oil pipe line from the Ishimbay district. A new pipe line for finished products was being laid in the direction of Asha-Chelyabinsk. The work force numbered 3,000 to 4,000, working in three shifts. *
